Codex Calixtinus.

Vetus manuscript of the 13th century preserved at the Archivo de la Catedral de Santiago de Compostella (no pressmark). It purports to be the revised edition of an older collection of books devoted to the cult of the apostle St. James and assigned by Pope Calixtus II (d. 1134). It comprises five books of "canticles":
(1) Selections of liturgical poems and hymns in honor of St. James (21 end; 1141 end; 1142 end).
(2) Canticles (liber secundus) I. Jacobi de xxx miraculis ejus.
(3) Liber tertius a Jacobi de translatione Jacobi.
(4) Liber quartus (historia Turpilii et Elisei) Karoli Magni et Rothmanni, falsely ascribed to stp. Turpin who died 850.
This book, at the beginning of the 17th century, was bound in leather, was detached from the codex and bound separately.

(5) Liber quintus, a guide for pilgrims containing topographical and ethnographical information. It was published in 1892 by G. Fira with the misleading title "Le codex de saint Jacques de Compostella (liber de miraculis sancti Jacobi) Livre v. The title "Liber de miraculis" belongs to the 2d book, and what was the 4th book before separation from the Codex Calixtinus contains the Historia Turpilii.

From being the name of the principal and most complete manuscript of the compilation, "Codex Calixtinus" came to be used frequently as title of the collection. In order to avoid this ambiguity Bédier proposed "Livre de saint Jacques" (Liber sancti Jacobi) as title of the compilation in distinction from Codex Calixtinus, the designation of the one particular manuscript at Compostella.
